My Weekend

Tracing back to the last weekend when my classmates and I went to a farm nearby, I can't wait to share the details with you guys.

Covering an area of 6,000 square metres, it has attracted a great number of tourists for their farm tour as a way of leisure. So do we. After the instruction of farm technicians, we started our adventure at once. Excited and thrilled, we were totally occupied with the fascinating farm exploration. Not only could we pick fresh vegetables and fruits in person, but also we could enjoy the fruits of our own labour directly.

It was getting so close to nature that has inspired all of us. Imagine how impressive it would be if you can personally experience the wonderful journey.

Some parents will buy any high-tech toy if they think it will help their child, but researchers said puzzles help children with math-related skills.

Psychologist Susan Levine, an expert on mathematics development in young children at the University of Chicago, found children who play with puzzles between ages 2 and 4 later develop better spatial skills. Puzzle play was found to be a significant predictor of cognition (认知) after controlling for differences in parents' income, education and the amount of parent talk, Levine said.

The researchers analyzed video recordings of 53 child-parent pairs during everyday activities at home and found children who play with puzzles between 26 and 46 months of age have better spatial skills when assessed at 54 months of age.

“The children who played with puzzles performed better than those who did not, on tasks that assessed their ability to rotate (旋转) and translate shapes,” Levine said in a statement.

The parents were asked to interact with their children as they normally would, and about half of the children in the study played with puzzles at one time. Higher-income parents tended to have children play with puzzles more frequently, and both boys and girls who played with puzzles had better spatial skills. However, boys tended to play with more complex-complicated puzzles than girls, and the parents of boys provided more spatial language and were more active during puzzle play than the parents of girls.

The findings were published in the journal Developmental Science.

1-In which aspect do children benefit from puzzle play?

- A. Building confidence.
- B. Developing spatial skills.
- C. Learning self-control.
- D. Gaining high-tech knowledge.

2-What did Levine take into consideration when designing her experiment?

- A. Parents' age.
- B. Children's imagination.
- C. Parents' education.
- D. Child-parent relationship.

3-How do boys differ from girls in puzzle play?

- A. They play with puzzles more often.
- B. They tend to talk less during the game.
- C. They prefer to use more spatial language.
- D. They are likely to play with tougher puzzles.

4-What is the text mainly about?

- A. A mathematical method.
- B. A scientific study.
- C. A woman psychologist.
- D. A teaching program

5-What can we infer from the sentence underlined?

- A. We can tell the acknowledge ability from children by puzzle play in some extent在某种程度上 if the particular indexes about their parents are set.

B. Puzzle play was discovered as the fourth factor of affecting children's cognition after their parents' income, education and amount of talk with their parents.

C. Among the factors affecting children's cognition—parents' income, education and the amount of parent talk, puzzle play tops them all.

D. The younger the children play with puzzles the better the spacial skills they have.
